Implementation of a smallpox vaccination program requires clinicians to be prepared to recognize and provide care to persons who develop adverse reactions as a result of vaccination. This program will provide information to clinicians on assessment, diagnosis, management, and treatment of patients with suspected adverse events.

Goal

Prepare clinicians to recognize, report, and clinically manage adverse reactions to smallpox vaccination.

Objectives

- Explain the rationale for smallpox vaccination
- Define the vaccination risks
- Recognize mild and serious vaccine complications
- Describe diagnosis, management, and treatment strategies for patients with vaccine adverse events
- Explain the procedures for adverse event reporting

Target Audiences

- Clinical specialists, including infectious disease specialists, dermatologists, critical care specialists, neurologists, ophthalmologists, allergists, and immunologists.
- Primary care clinicians, including emergency room clinicians, internists, pediatricians, and family medicine physicians
- State and local health department staff involved in adverse event assessment and reporting

Faculty

Inger Damon, MD, PhD, Chief, Poxvirus Section, Division of Viral and Rickettsial Diseases, National Center for Infectious Diseases (NCID), Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, (CDC)
